WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17.—Discussion of the President's declaration Saturday in fayor of a law limiting the amount of money one man can accumulate was as general to-day as it was Sinday and yesterday. Few will venture to express opinions for publication, but few there are who do not discuss the Subtect.

Explanations as to what the President Explanations as to what the President meant by his declaration are as numerous as ever. The general opinion is that he simply wanted to get in front of the wave of radicalism he believes is sweeping over the country in order that he might be swept into the White House for another term. Despite the fact that he said on the night of the election last fall, one year ago, that he would not "inder any circumstances" be a candidate for another nomination or accept nomination for a third term, it is safe to say that the majority of those who discuss the latest deliverance of the President believe that he is deliberately seeking another nomination.

Doubts Expressed.

Another explanation of the course of the President is that, while he has no thought of accepting the nomination in 1998, he wishes to take advantage of the trend of popular sentiment, so that, as the "Peerless Tribune of the Common People," he will be in a position to name the candidate two years bence, retain his position as the head of the party in America, and on his retirement from the sufficessor of Thomas C. Platt. It is the opinion of those who take this view of the President's attitude that it is his opinion of those who take this view of the President's attitude that it is his ambition to serve six years in the Senate, retaining his commanding position in his party, and then be nominated for the presidenty again.

The frequency with which one hears doubts expressed, even by Republicans, as to the sincerity of the President when he expressed the opinion that the amount of money a man should be allowed to dispose of by will should be limited by law, is significant. A year ago, no Republicans and few Democrats could be found willing to express a doubt of the sincerity and honesty of Theodore Roosevelt concerning anything.

What Glass Thinks.

"I take very little stock in this talk of the President's about limiting the amount of money a man shall be allowed to accimulate," said Representative Glass.

"Everybody knows it is impossible to take from a man any portion of his accumulations, and like the 'old Greeks, appropriate it to the government, and the enforcement of an inheritance tax is impracticable, even if advisable.

"It makes me tired to hear the Republicans indulge in all this talk about the danger of great fortunes, and then keep, ou, volugs to continue a system which chalifies the accumulation of such chornous wealth. The protective tariff is responsible for whatever of danger there is from wealth in the hands of a few individuals. The traiff is the wall behind which the trust magnates have heltered themselves, and have accumulated all this money which the President now says is dangerous. Give us a tariff iaw, which will make it impossible for the trusts to charge, our own people twice what they charge the foreigner, and the trust question is solved, and all the dangers of aggregited wealth are climinated."

"By a Copposing Alcohol Bill.

The bill repealing the tax on denatured alcohol, is now in the Senate Committee on Pinance. The time at which it will be reported out cannot be predicted. It is understood that the chairman of the committee, Senator Aldrich, and a majority of the Republicans constituting it, are opposed to the bill, although several of them are quoted as having said they would vote for the measure if it were to come before the Senate. The question is whether it will be reported in time for action at the present session. In case action is not taken this session, the bill would go over until nex winter, without having to pass the House again, as this Congress does not expire until the fourth of March, 1907. It is said the opponents of the bill will renew their efforts to preven its passage. It is claimed that the liquor interests of the United States are directly behind the bill, having incited the farmer United States are directly behind the United States are directly behind the bill, having incited the farmers, and manufacturers to advocate its passage. Whether that be the case or not, it is soldom that a bill has such universal endorsement as this one.

All the Virginia delegation voted for the bill, which passed the House without a recorded vote being taken. Senator Martin and Senator Daniel will support it. Representative Lamb was in doubt at one time as to whether he should vote for or against the bill. It has become almost convinced, however, that denatured alcohol cannot be used in the production of ether, and that the Richmond Ether Works, which he feared would be seriously hurt if the bill passed, will not suffer injury.

That was seventy-five years ago. The Department of Agriculture was created in 1862 as a bureau of the Interior Department. The head of this bureau was designated as the commissioner of agriculture, and later, during Cleveland's first administration, the position was raised to the dignity of a cabinet office.

"I am afraid the Republicans, judging from some of the utterances of Democrats, recently will come to the conclusion that we are something of standpatters also," said Rep. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, to-day. "It hardly seems like the days when Roger Q, Mills and John G. Carlisle thundered against the injustices of high protection. I recollect hearing that John A. Logan, when a senator from Illinois, wrote to Librarian Spofford requesting him to send him whatever works he had in the congressional library, on protection and free trade, saying he would see that they were returned in a day or two. The following day, an express wagon, loaded down with books of all sizes stopped in from validation and free trade and present the senator's house, and the driver handed him a note from Mr. Spofford, which saids that two more wagon-loads would be sen the next day. Logan sent the books as quickly as possible.

TILLMAN DENOUNCES "INFAMY"; DEMANDS THOROUGH INQUIRY

Reads Sensational Letter From New York Banker Involving Root, Morton and Higgins.

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, April 17.—Preceding the taking up of the railroad rate bid in the Senate to-day, Mr. Tillman called up his resolution directing the Senate Committee on Finance to enter upon an investigation of the question of campaign contributions by the national banks and after he had spoken at length the resolution was referred to the Finance Committee.

of the last campaign.

Mr. Tillman said that he would not confine the inquiry to the Republican committee, but would extend it to the Democratic committee. He again referred to the affairs of the Walsh Bank, of Chicago, and in that connection was engaged in sharp controversy by Mr. Hopkins, who declared the Walsh Bank not to be insolvent. He also said in reply to a question from Mr. Tillman that Mr. Walsh had not been indicted.

Mr. Foster spoke for almost three hours on the rate bill, contending for the validity of the proposed legislation, urging its

"Stolen" Money.

Mr. Tillman had read an article by James W. Breen, printed in the New York Herald, entitled, "How the banks filled Hannah's war, chests," making it the basis of his comments. Mr. Tillman said the members of the Committee on Frivileges and Elections had told him that as a matter of course everybody Frivileges and Elections had told him that as a matter of course everybody bad contributed to the fund of 1895. They had promised to report the bill, but three weeks had passed and still the bill was not on the Senate calendar.

Mr. Förnker speaking of the sub-committee having the bill in charge, said that he had been in frequent conference with Messes, Knox and Balley, the other members of the sub-committee and that they were now prepared to report to the full committee recommending legislation. No disposition had been manifested to

No disposition had been manifested to centrovert the charge that contributions had been made in 1898.

Mr. Tillman stated that he had been told that the total contributions to the Republican fund in 1896 had been $3,800,000; in 1900, $2,800,000, and in 1904, $1,900,000, he also spoke of "the expose made by Colonel Andy Hamilton in his recent spectacular appearance before a legislative committee at Albany, in which he said that in addition to the contributions by the McCalls, he had given $75,000 to the Republican fund," and expressed the opinion that many of the facts in connection with those contributions were still tion with those contributions were still being "snuggled up yonder at Albany." He said that the McCurdys were being "sued for $2,000,000 that had been misappropriated or stolen."
"I don't like to say stolen," he added "but I like the word."

Serious Charges.

In support of his sugestion that some of the facts were being covered up Mr. Tillman read a letter which he had received to-day from a New York banker, whose name he did not give, in which the suggestion was made that if it was considered desirable to get at the de-tails concerning the Republican campaign contributions the committee should ex-amine Auditor Anthony, of the Repub-lican National Committee, who, he said, could give a complete list of all the con-could give a complete list of all the contributors. He added that statements of contributors and of those who did not contribute were made periodically and that the President knew who they were. The same letter writer volunteered the information that the examination would reveal the fact that Secretary Root had been responsible for the appointment of ex-Secretary Morton as the head of the Equitable Company, and that the pure ex-Secretary Morton as the head of the Equitable Company, and that the purpose of his selection had been to head off the insurance investigation. He declared also that Governor Higgins had held off the inquiry as long as possible, and that when the investigation was begun it was undertaken by the Republicans in order to insure their control of it.

Investigate All. Continuing, Mr. Tillman said another reason why he desired the investigation as to why certain national banks are
